Background:

The Education Hill Neighborhood, with its variety of parks, schools, and family-friendly amenities, remains one of Redmond most desired places to live. The neighborhood continues to provide a pleasantly diverse array of housing choices, including the most recent and upcoming variety of projects. Understanding that changes and growth may bring questions and concerns to Education Hill's residents, the Neighborhoods Planning Team is seeking your help. Following adoption of the updated Education Hill neighborhood plan, residents will be asked to join a Neighborhood Citizen Committee in order to help advance implementation of the plan's policies and regulations, as well as priority projects and future considerations, and to help maintain a communication link with the City.

A great deal of work was accomplished by the Education Hill Citizen Advisory Committee who dedicated more than one year to assist with and guide the development of the updated plan. They considered many aspects of the neighborhood that may change as well as important features to retain over the next twenty years. With these considerations came identification of projects and future considerations that will prove essential to the sustainability and vitality of the Education Hill neighborhood for the long-term. The Neighborhood Citizen Committee will now take that work and the plan into the future.
